FIGHT REGULATING EVOLUTION TEACHING

Scientists Term Legislative Interference To Limit Doctrine "Profound Mistake

WASHINGTON, Jan.4—The Council for the American Association for the Advancement of Science, meeting at Cambridge, Mass., adopted a resolution, prepared by the three foremost authorities in the field of evolution—Dr. Edwin Grant Conklin, professor of zoology, Princeton; Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, president American Museum of Natural History; and Dr. Charles B. Davenport, director, department of genetsic, Carnegie Institution.

The council affirmend that: "So far as the scientific evidence of the evolution of plants and animals and man concerned, there is no ground whatever for the assertion that these evidences constitute a "mere guess." No scientific generalization is more strongly supported by thoroughly tested evidence than is that of organic evolution.

"The evidence in favor of the evolution of man are sufficient to convince every scientists of note in the world. These evidences are increasing in number and importance every year.

"The theory of evolution is one of the most potent of the greatinfluences for good that have thus far entered into human experience; it has promoted the progress of knowledge, it fostered unprejudiced injury, and it has served as an invaluable aid in humanity's search for truth in many fields."

The council stated that "any legislation attempting to limit the teaching of any scientific doctrine so well established and so widely accepted by specialists, as is the doctrine of evolution, would be a profound mistake, which could not fail to injure and retard the advancement of knowledge and of human welfare by denying the freedom of teaching and inquiry which is essential to all progress."

DR. TRIGG THOMAS, FAMOUS EVANGELIST COMING HERE

Dr. Trigg M. A. Thomas, who is holding revival services at Pineville, is having the greatest success, and the First Presbyterian church of this city is looking forward to his coming here January 15 to hold a three weeks series of meetings, Mr. Nisbet being his singer.

Dr. Thomas is one of the most famous evangelists in the country and has had the greatest successes wherever has has been, while he is doted up for more than a year ahead The members of the church here are making great preparations for his coming and after his first sermon, everyone will want to hear every sermon he preaches. The Atlanta Constitution says of him:

"Rarely has it been our good fortune as a city to have such a personality as Trigg Thomas among us. He is fiery, impassioned and dead in earnest and is interesting to the least of his large congregations. The First Presbyterian church received more than 400 new members through his meetings, but thought it was purely Presbyterian effort, hundreds were added to the other church and every denomination benefitted on account of his work. We cannot praise him too highly."

INSTALLATION OF NEW KIWANIAN OFFICERS MADE

A P. Liebig, New Head, Tells Of Coming Year—Retiring President Hill Thanks Club For Co-operation And Willing Spirit

TO ENTERTAIN PINEVILLE KIWANIANS HERE SOON

Installation of the new Kiwanis Club officers was held last night at the club meeting in the Hotel Cumberland, with L. D. Hill chairman of the evening presided. Short talks were made by the retiring officers. Secretary C. G. Smyth and vice-president Jack Inman, and the incoming officers, Secretary C. A. Blackburn, Vice-president J. W. Bradner, and the new directors. The chief addresses were made by retiring President T. R. Hill and the new President, A. P. Liebig.

T. R Hill drew the attendance prize, and according to a new rule was required to give the name and business of five men seated nearest him. The club voted to invite the Pineville Kiwanis Club to attend the next ladies night here, and a committee to guarantee paying for their dinner volunteered.

Mr. Hill gave his farewell address in his usual eloquent manner, telling of the pleasure it had been to be president of the club here and commending them for their never-failing support, willing help and co-operation. "The Middlesboro Kiwanis club has been behind every good civic accomplishment during the past year," said Mr. Hill. "But there are bigger things yet that the club can and will do. The people of this city look to this organization to put over what is best for the city, and their faith is not misplaced. The Middlesboro club will continue to hold its power because of the character of its wel chosen members and officers

"Service is the greatest quality any man can have," said Mr. Hill, showing that, because Abraham Lincoln served so unselfishly, his memory lives forever. "Only so far as this club serves unselfishly," he concluded, will it succeed and live in memory."

Mr. Liebig, the new president spoke of the future, and showed the members clearl what he expected of them. "The Kiwanis club is an organization of men banded together for no other purpose than to do the most possible good in their community. Every man owes a great debt to his community and this is the way he can payit. Co-operation and organization are the big things in puting across our program," he continued, "though we must keep our heads and not let enthusiasm carry us away."

Mr. Liebig said that the two big matters that confront the club at the opening of this year were the convention and some way to take care of the numerous drives which come up The former, he said, was even a bigger job than the club realized but he was confident they would make it a success. The latter, he showed, had practically been left upto the Kiwanis club and musthe solved by a community chest plan or some other way. In closing, Mr. Liebig urged the members to be ready to help whenever called on and to do what they did without thought of personal aggrandizement

The folowing standing committees for the year were appointed, the first man on each committee to be the chairman.

KENTUCKY BANKS ARE TO BE RATED

Banking Department Establishes Standard Of Excellence For Efficient Gradation

By Associated Press.

FRANKFORT, Ky. Jan. 5.—The State Banking Department has established a standard of excellence for banks in Kentucky by which officials will be able, at a glance, to tell the standing of any institution, according to an announcement made by James P. Lewis, state banking commissioner. All banks examined after January 1, are to be graded along the lines outlined by commissioner Lewis.

Grading of the banks will be on the basis of 100 per cent, divided as follows: loans, 35, directors' duties 15; bookeeping, 15; capital and surplus, 10; overdrafts, 10; insurance 5. To attain a standing of "excellent" a bank must have a grade of 85 or more. "Good" shows a rating of from 75 to 85; "fair" from 70 to 75, and below 70 is listed as "unsatisfactory."

It is expected that the new system will act as an incentive to banks to attain high averages and thus increase the standing of the institution in the community, according to officials of the department. All banks will be graded by the reports made semi-annually by the deputi examiners.

Banks which attain a grade of "excellent" will be placed on the honor roll of the State Banking Department, according to Commissioner Lewis.

The percentage allowed for each classification is further subdivided so that all departments of banking are covered. The 35 per cent schedule on loans is divided as follows: No loans more than 60 days past due, 5 per cent; at least 10 per cent of investments in liquid or readily marketable form, 5 per cent; no uncollectable loans 5 per cent; total bills payable and rediscounts not exceeding capital stock 5 per cent; singned financial statements from all persons or firms whose loans exceed $1,000, 2 per cent; banking laws fully complied with, 3 per cent, and no one-name paper unless secured or legal and moral worth of the borrower is unquestionable, 5 per cent.

Directors, duties, rated at 15 per cent, are subdivided into monthly meetings of a majority of the board, 5 per cent; all loans of $500 or more approved by at least three directors, 5 per cent, and complete record of each meeting properly kept and signed, 5 per cent.

Bookkeeping is listed with eight subdivisions; captal stock and surplus, three; overdrafts, three; interest on each.

FIERY CROSS DISCOVERED NEAR JEFFERSON, IND.

By Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan.5—Louisville citizens are curious over reports of a "celebration" or pow-wow of a robed band on the outskirts of Jeffersonville, Ind., across the Ohio river from Louisville, told by a mid-night motorist who extinguished their "flaming cross" while the robed participants departed in automobiles.

Approximately twenty participants in the affair left as he drove up to the scene, he said. He climbed from his car and extinguished the fire in the flaming standard for fear it would burn more valuable property, before coming on to Louisville.

The "fiery cross" was described as two sticks, the upright five feet long crossed by a horizontal piece three feet long. It was wrapped with rags, soaked in kerosene, and ignited, he said.

This is the first demonstration by robed persons since the happy vogue of making public contributions to pastors of less-prosperous churches with "impressive silena cermonies" in which white robes figures, was dropped in this vicinity several months ago.

Several persons who were more cautious than they were curious, reportedhaving seen the burning cross which the motorist reported having dismantled.

A THOUGHT

So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.—Psalm 90:12.

It avails us nothing unduly to bemoan our errors or losses. For happen what may to the man of simple faith, still, when the last minute comes of the sorrowful hour, when the week or the year is ended, still will he find some cause for gladness as he turns his eyes within.—Maeterlinck.

THE REAL YOU

Some of us have our music in our souls instead of in our voices, says David Gibson, dean of business writers. So, in the last analysis, we're all great singers. All we lack is the power of expression—a certain mechanical arrangement of flesh in the throat.

The real you is revealed in what you like and appreciate, rather than what you can do.

We're all singers, we're all dancers, we're all artists.

Maybe we cannot paint a picture. But our souls have the artistic sense—the desire to paint, also appreciation of art when we view it at the museum. Flattering to the vanity, but true.

All of us are inwardly clever, artistic, shrewd, wise and good. But only a few of us can express what we feel.

The rest "can't get it out." It's like a cork in a bottle. You are reminded of this when a friend, with a voice like filing a saw, tries to convey to you a melody he has heard and which he is carrying in his soul. He has the message, all right, but he can't get it across.

Wisdom resides in every soul. So-called knowledge and education merely are spades with which we uncover our hidden wisdom. The uncovering, we call "developing." But the real power is there all the time, latent, dormant, otherwise there wouldn't be anything to develop.

We all have evil streaks in our make-up. The people we call good are the one with the ability to keep their evil natures suppressed—locked up. Others haven't yet found the key, so the evil runs at large.

Good lies buried, dormant, in our make-up, same as evil.

It also has to be uncovered (developed). A more difficult job in some cases than others.

Often it takes a heavy blow—sorrow or misfortune—to bring out our better selves, our finer emotions. And sometimes the same sorrow or misfortune sets loose the evil nature instead of the good. The qualities, good or bad, were there all the time waiting to be brought forth.

Theoretically you may disagree with the great truth lurking in the background. That truth is this: In the make-up of nearly every human there lie buried tremendous powers and marvelous abilities. To bring these out is the problem of life, of success, of happiness, of destiny.

The Real You is a vast storehouse of treasures, waiting to be opened.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

THE HUMORISTS

By Berton Braley

They have no awe of anything.
Their barbs satirical they fling
At fake and solemn-faced pretense:
And with a blithe irreverence.
And laughing antics of a clown,
They topple pompous idols down.

An ugly evil rears its head,
A thing of mystery and dread;
The humorists make jests about it,
With jab and gibe and quip they flout it,
And presently away it wriggles.

The dragons, menacing and foul,
That most majestically prowl
About our land; whose fiery breath
Scares serious-minded folks to death,
Sneak to their caves, devoid of vigor,
When humorists begin to snigger.

How shall we estimate their worth
Who snatch chimeras with their mirth;
Who vanquish ills to which we truckle,
With no more weapon than a chuckle?
Here's to them, may they never wane,
They make us laugh—and keep us sane!

BRONNER TELLS OF TREATMENT AS COUE PATIENT

Describes Clinic In Nancy, France Where Informality Reigns And Scientist Receives All Comers Himself

AMERICANS TREATED SUFFER MAINLY FROM NEURASTHENIA

By Milton Bronner

NANCY, France, Jan. 3—I've been Coued!

Which rendered into every-day English means that, supposedly being ill with a nervous breakdown, I have come to the famous auto-suggestion clinics held by Monsieur Emile Coue and have been taught that—Every day, in every way, I am getting better and better.

You tell a friend in Paris you are running over to Nancy to put yourself in the hands of Monsieur Coue, and unless he has been Coued himself, he announces pictures you being questioned and examined, tucked in bed with a uniformed nurse telling you three times a day what the doctor says you must take and must forego. And finally, there is, of course, the question of the fee for the doctor and the charges for the hospital.

That is what makes it so nice about being Coued.

There is no fee. There is no hard and fast regimen. There are not even fussy preliminaries.

Take my own case. I simply "barged in" on Monsieur Coue. Most people do. He is used to it. He likes it. He encourages it.

Monsieur Coue Over 60

Coue himself is a bit over 60 with fresh pink complexion and silvery gray hair, mustache and beard. His dark eyes twinkle with good humor, with tolerance, with comprehension, and with physical mental and moral well being.

Years ago he was a pharmacist. Then he evolved his theories of how to help us heal ourselves of many ills. He retired from his pharmacy and has been freely spending himself on the new work ever since.

Here in Nancy—except when traveling—on Mondays and Fridays he has open house for all comers, natives and foreigners.

On these days he has two clinics in the morning and two in the afternoon. So that for six solid hours he is on his feet, talking, demonstrating, inculcating his principles, and preaching a doctrine of hope.

There is in his clinics neither the formality of a new religion, nor of the old practice of medicine.

The little stockily built man, dressed in his simple dark gray suit and black tie, walks in, nods brightly to all about him and then looks comfortably up against the hall door.

Patients From Everywhere

In addition to the French peasants and middle class people who come from all over this Lorraine country, I saw Americans from New York and Connecticut, Britions, Canadians and one couple from South Africa.

The Americans were mainly sufferers from neurasthenia. The French peasants came to be helped in their sufferings from stomach troubles, eczema, rheumatism, neuritis, all kinds of chronic ills.

Coue himself says that young persons and especially women, are most susceptible to his treatment.

In the clinics I attended women were in the great majority and many of them were old.

Coue spots the newcomers at once. He has an excellent memory for faces and for the illnesses of the individuals.

He came over to me at once and I thought—"Now for it."

But he simply asked in his kindly interested way what I was suffering from.

"Ah, bad nerves." Many of you Americans seem troubled that way.

You will get better—and soon.

There were no other questions that day, so far as I was concerned. But I was now a full-fledged patient of a clinic and welcome to get all the good out of it that I could.

TOMORROW—Bronner tells of his first treatment by Coue.

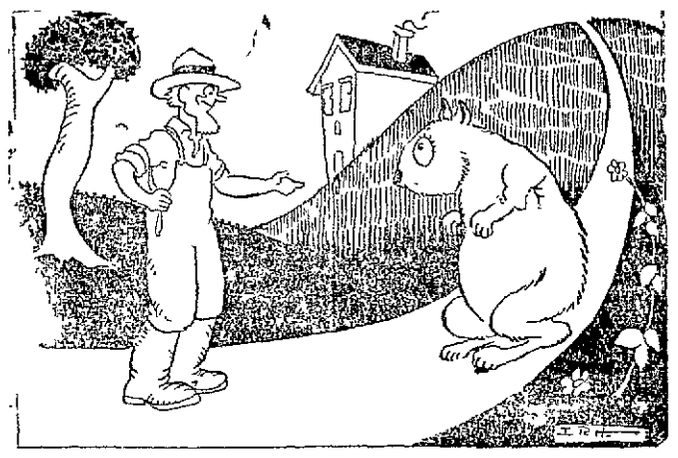
SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR UP UGLY, BROKEN OUT SKIN

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation.

Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton



At that minute he heard a pleasant voice speaking. "How do you do, Mr. Woodchuck?" it said.

Nancy and Nick and Dusty Coat, the fairy sandman, made another trip around to all the sleeping creatures tucked away so snugly and warm in their beds.

Ever so quietly they shook more magic powder all around the sleepers and then tip-toed softly out.

Suddenly a queer thing happened. Wally Woodchuck Groundhog's mattress flew open with a snap and Wally was tumbled pell-mell down a long tube like a coal chute. He thought the world had come to an end or that there had been an earthquake and that he was sliding through a crack right toward China.

'My goodness!" he cried. "Here I thought I was settled for a nice long winter's sleep and this is what happens!"

Wally hadn't time to say another word, for he landed on his head and then rolled over two or three times and stopped. In spite of all his tumbling and bumping and rolling, he wasn't hurt a speck. In fact it all felt rather comfortable and he was sorry when he found himself at a standstill.

At that minute he heard a pleasant voice speaking. "How do you do Mr Woodchuck!" it said. "Or do you prefer to be called Groundhog?" I am Farmer Hoe Mow, at your service. Dusty Coat, the Dwarf, and his helpers, Nancy and Nick, sent me word to expect you by the underground tunnel, so I've been waiting. You must be hungry after your long trip.'

Wally had got to his feet by this time with much grunting and groaning for he was still fat in spite of his lack of provisions.

'Hungry!" cried Wally, rolling his eyes. "Say, mister, that's my middle name. But it wasn't the trip. No, Sir! Food's been scarcer than frog feathers for more'n a month. Dusty Coat put me to sleep with some magic powder and I kinda wish I'd stayed thataway."

"Oh, tut," said Farmer Hoe Mow. "I was just about to tell you. The wheat field is on your right, the cornfield on your left, the orchard in front is at your service, and behind you is the garden. We hope to make you comfortable in Dreamland."

Kate Ward wondered if she had understood the nurse correctly.

'You have no such patient? Dorothy is not here?" she said.

"No.' The nurse looked at Kate strangely.

'Could you have made a mistake in hospitals?" she suggested.

'No." Kate was turning to leave.

She stopped at the nearest drug store and telephoned the laundry of Sing Loy. She asked for Alice.

"Dorothy isn't at the hospital," she said when she heard the girl's voice at the other end of the wire. "You said she was taken to St. Anthony's, didn't you?"

"Yes, she's there," snapped Alice.

"But I've been there and found that she isn't," persisted Kate.

'She is!" Alice replaced the receiver.

Kate was stunned. She stood for a second with the receiver in her hand, then hung it on its hook and made her way to the street.

She pondered the thing, and at length understood that Alice had lied.

"Why?" she asked herself. "What does Alice want of money if not to use for Dorothy?"

Her impulse was to go to the laundry and demand an explanation. On second thought, however, she decided to let events take their course. Kate returned to her hotel, repacked her traveling bag and was soon on her way to Palestine.

Justin was puttering about the flower garden when she reached the house. Monk had stretched his fat body in the grass near Justin. He looked up as Kate turned in the gates, scrambled to his feet, and bounded to her.

"Well—Katie. I'm glad you're here." Justin stopped digging in the loose, dark earth long enough to smile at his daughter.

Justin Parsons' smile was a delightful thing—gentle, whimsical withal strong.

"I'm glad to be here, father—it's like a haven. The little house, the little garden, Monk and you. There's such a joy in quiet things." Kate was petting Monk and watching her father displace earth and reset roots.

"Yes, child—but few people realize it until they've squandered their time and have little more than the eventide left."

Kate watched the shadows deepen on the hills toward the west. As dusk settled she entered the house and prepared dinner.

It was a starlit evening when the three again sought the open space under the great pine. Kate and her father talked in low tones of the events of Kate's trip. Monk was restless. At length he set off, stalking slowly in the direction of the river road. He was gone only a few minutes. Then returned, whined, and set out again.

"He's discovered something, Katie." Justin was on his feet. "Let's follow." Kate, too, rose.

DOES WOMAN PAY?
CONSCIENCE DECIDES

Does the woman pay?

"A woman's conscience determines whether she pays or not," answers Rita Weiman short stroy, scenario and play writer.

"The woman never pays unless she wants to—whether it's dinner, the theater, the rent or life! She always can evade, if her conscience will let her.

"But most of the time it won't.

"Life has a way of refusing to let us be grifters.

"And women have a way of sitting in judgment on themselves that settles accounts twofold.

"You can escape anything in the world but yourself and taxes. Sooner or later you make yourself pay both."

Trial Separation for Peggy

London and New York separate Peggy Marsh and her husband, Albert Johnson (inset)—it's a "trial separation" to test the true worth of their love, according to Peggy. She went abroad after Johnson was shot last summer at Jack Clifford's camp, taking her son, the child of the late Henry Field, with her. But Peggy and Albert are heavy contributors to the cable companies' profits.

A Sculptor To Marble

What would you have me, beckoning stone—
Whose voice from far shores on the winds blow

Riddle me this, gray sphinx; what thing?
Is this you would have of my fashioning?

What voice cries low yet insistently—
Who in you breathlessly wits to be free?

Still keep il hidden, the form you enfold;
Shroud at in prison in silence and dream
Until I can look on its beauty and live.
slowly, even falteringly, let me brew out
The invisible image that waits.

Some day I shall conquer you, shapeless mas—
You that implore yet divinely resist:
Some day I shall find you, face that I seek.
Keep in the block and unprison you
When flesh and soul shall have gathered new strength
From the earth and the sky and the sea,
From the clod and the wind and the rain—
From the joy and the pain of all things that are,
And I reach to the far divinity
Hidden in me as in you, gray stone,
I shall find you then, face that I seek—
Find you and you only,
Face that I seek.
But what would you have of me, beckoning stone—
Whose voice from far shores on the wind is blown?

GOOD MANNERS

It is not very often that the host is present on his wife's day "at home," since business usually claims his time during the day. There is no reason, however, why he should not be present, if he desires and it is convenient for him. His duty, of course, is to share in the honors and obligations of the occasion. When it can be arranged, it is delightful for husband and wife to receive their friends together.

Louisville

70 years ago The L. & N. ran from Louisville to Nashville—a distance of 185 miles.

Nashville

Entering Its 70th Year Of Service

On March 5, 1850, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad was incorporated with a capital stock of three million dollars. Three years later it began the work of constructing its lines over the 185 mile distance between the two cities for which the road was named. On November 1, 1859, its first through-train was run to Nashville.

The History of the development of the L. & N. from this short strip of track to its present great proportions,—traversing thirteen states, with more than five thousand miles of track—is the story of almost unsurmountable obstacles overcome, and undaunted courage on the part of its early management.

The little map at the right clearly shows the extent of its progress in these seventy years. In October, 1871, the L. & N. assumed the contract for the construction of a railroad between Decatur and Montgomery, and in July, 1872, it leased the line from Nashville to Decatur. In January, 1881, the line from Montgomery to Mobile became a part of the L. & N. system, and in October of the same year the road from Mobile to New Orleans was acquired. In the following November the road between Cincinnati and Louisville, including Lexington, was taken over by the L. & N.

These additions to the L. & N.'s corporate embrace completed the first fast through trunk line service between Cincinnati and New Orleans, which—with the branch to Memphis added in October, 1872, the line to Pensacola taken over in October, 1880, the St. Louis Division included in January, 1881, and the link between Cincinnati and Atlanta completed in January, 1905—served to give the L. & N. system a permanent place in the front rank of America's great railroad systems.

The L. & N. today gives unexcelled freight and passenger service to practically all of the population and trade centers of the South and Central West.

Today—70 years later—it has over 5000 miles of trackage penetrating into the nooks and corners of the Southland.

Not many calendars and other articles of advertising matter which usually flood the mails around the first of the year have passed through the postoffice this year, according to postoffice officials. Only a few local firms seem to have used calendars as advertising mediums The paucity of calendars can only be accounted for by the supposition that business men are seeking other, and perhaps more effective, ways of focusing the attention of the public on their wares.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. Is an Advertising Investment Good Collateral?

YOUR money deposited in banks is loaned by bankers upon the security of merchandise whose value has been created and is maintained by advertising.

Is the created more substantial than its creator---the product than the tool?

More and more bankers are recognizing the essential verity of this principle---that money can be loaned as safely upon a sound advertising investment as upon other collateral which advertising has developed and maintained.
